JUSTICE PORTFOLIO

The Department of Justice is the central coordination agency for the Justice Portfolio, as well as for a number of statutory agencies and offices, and judicial and quasi-judicial bodies. The Department provides the organisational, policy and management focus to achieve the commitments made by the Labor Government towards its vision of building a safe and just society in Victoria.

The overall Ministerial responsibility for the Justice Department is shared by the three Ministers responsible for four Ministerial portfolios, namely:

- Attorney-General;
- Minister for Police and Emergency Services;
- Minister for Corrections; and
- Minister for Consumer Affairs.

Their powers and duties are primarily reflected in the legislation for which each Minister is responsible. A list of all relevant legislation is included as Appendices to this report. The agencies for which each Minister has responsibility are shown in the organisation chart in Appendix A.

In the exercise of their portfolio responsibilities, the Ministers are assisted by Mr Richard Wynne, MP as Parliamentary Secretary to the Department of Justice.

The Justice portfolio covers Government responsibilities in the justice system such as Courts and Tribunals, which perform distinct functions that are independent of each other, and are based upon the separation of powers, as upheld by our democratic system and the rule of law.

SECRETARY'S FOREWORD

Mr Peter Harmsworth
Secretary

During the past twelve months, the Government theme of modernising the justice system was the major influence on the Department's work. It was also a year of developing a more integrated and seamless approach to service delivery to the Victorian community.

The modernising process required a concerted program of review and the adoption of a more strategic long-term planning approach to justice issues. This was perhaps best characterised by an intensive research and development process to finalise the Corrections Long Term Management Strategy. The success of this work in achieving a strategic and well-argued case was reflected in the May Budget announcement of funding of $334 million for the Strategy. This funding will set in train the pursuit of a correctional system to take us through to the next decade.

The initiative of seamless and integrated service delivery provides the framework for better aligning the diverse elements of the Justice portfolio. The operation of the portfolio as a system, rather than as disparate parts, is helping to tackle some important linkages between our activities and those of other Government agencies whose functions and responsibilities are intertwined with the justice system. This will provide a constant challenge to me and to my Executive Team as well as to staff of the Department.

The year 2001 was the International Year of the Volunteer. This is an opportunity to recognise that the achievements in the Justice portfolio are the result not only of the work of staff but also of the many who give their time freely. Often such people go unrecognised in our community and this year has been a good opportunity to say thank you. Volunteers are present throughout the Justice portfolio, in courts, prisons, emergency services, fire services, consumer and tenancy services. They are also present in the lesser known areas, where genealogy groups working out of Births, Deaths and Marriages are helping the community to track its past. While there have been many formal and official functions during the year for volunteers, I would also like to add my public thanks to them for their magnificent contribution to delivering high quality services to the Victorian community.

Finally, I need to emphasise that I am indebted to staff of the Department for the sheer amount of work undertaken in what has been a hectic year. Some of that work is reflected in the pages of this Report and especially in the summary pages immediately following. However, there are many other programs and activities which haven't been specifically identified. I am constantly impressed by the capacity of staff for ongoing effort, innovation and good humour. To the Justice team I offer my sincere thanks for their hard work and professional dedication.

THE DEPARTMENT IN PROFILE

The Department is structured around the four portfolio groups comprising three core functional areas – Justice Operations, Legal, Consumer Affairs and Equity – and a corporate group which provides corporate services, planning, review, organisational improvement strategies, and Ministerial services and co-ordination functions.

The Departmental Executive Committee

Mr Peter Harmsworth, Secretary

Mr Harmsworth became Secretary of the Department of Justice in July 1998. His role as Secretary is to ensure the management of compliance with broad Government policies within the Justice portfolio, and to oversee the implementation of the Government's broad law and order policies within the State of Victoria.

Mr John Charleson, Deputy Secretary, Corporate Services

As Deputy Secretary, Corporate Services, Mr Charleson supports Departmental Business Units by providing essential corporate services such as human resource management, information technology, and business services for the Department, while co-ordinating key corporate activities such as budgets, industrial relations and capital planning across the wider portfolio.

Ms Bernadette Steele, Deputy Secretary, Consumer and Equity Services

The Deputy Secretary for the Consumer and Equity Services portfolio group manages Consumer and Business Affairs and the Registry of Births, Deaths and Marriages, advising both the Minister for Consumer Affairs and the Attorney-General. For the period under review, the Consumer Affairs and Equity portfolio

Group included an auspicing role to the Office of the Equal Opportunity Commissioner, the Office of the Public Advocate, the Business Licensing Authority, the Patriotic Funds Council, the Defence Reserves Re-employment Board, Estate Agents Council and the Prostitution Control Advisory Committee.

Mr Alan Clayton, Deputy Secretary, Justice Operations

The primary role of Deputy Secretary, Justice Operations is to assist and advise the Minister for Police and Emergency Services and the Minister for Corrections in his relationships with the statutory authorities and associated agencies that make up the Police and Fire Services portfolio. Mr Clayton is responsible for Crime Prevention, Corrections, Justice Policy and Emergency Services. He oversees the implementation of major Government policy initiatives and special projects and provides support in relation to the State's emergency management arrangements. Under the auspices of Justice Operations are Victoria Police, Police Appeals Board, Metropolitan Fire and Emergency Services Board, Country Fire Authority, Adult Parole Board, Victorian Emergency Management Council and the Victorian Community Council Against Violence.

Ms Elizabeth Eldridge, Deputy Secretary, Legal

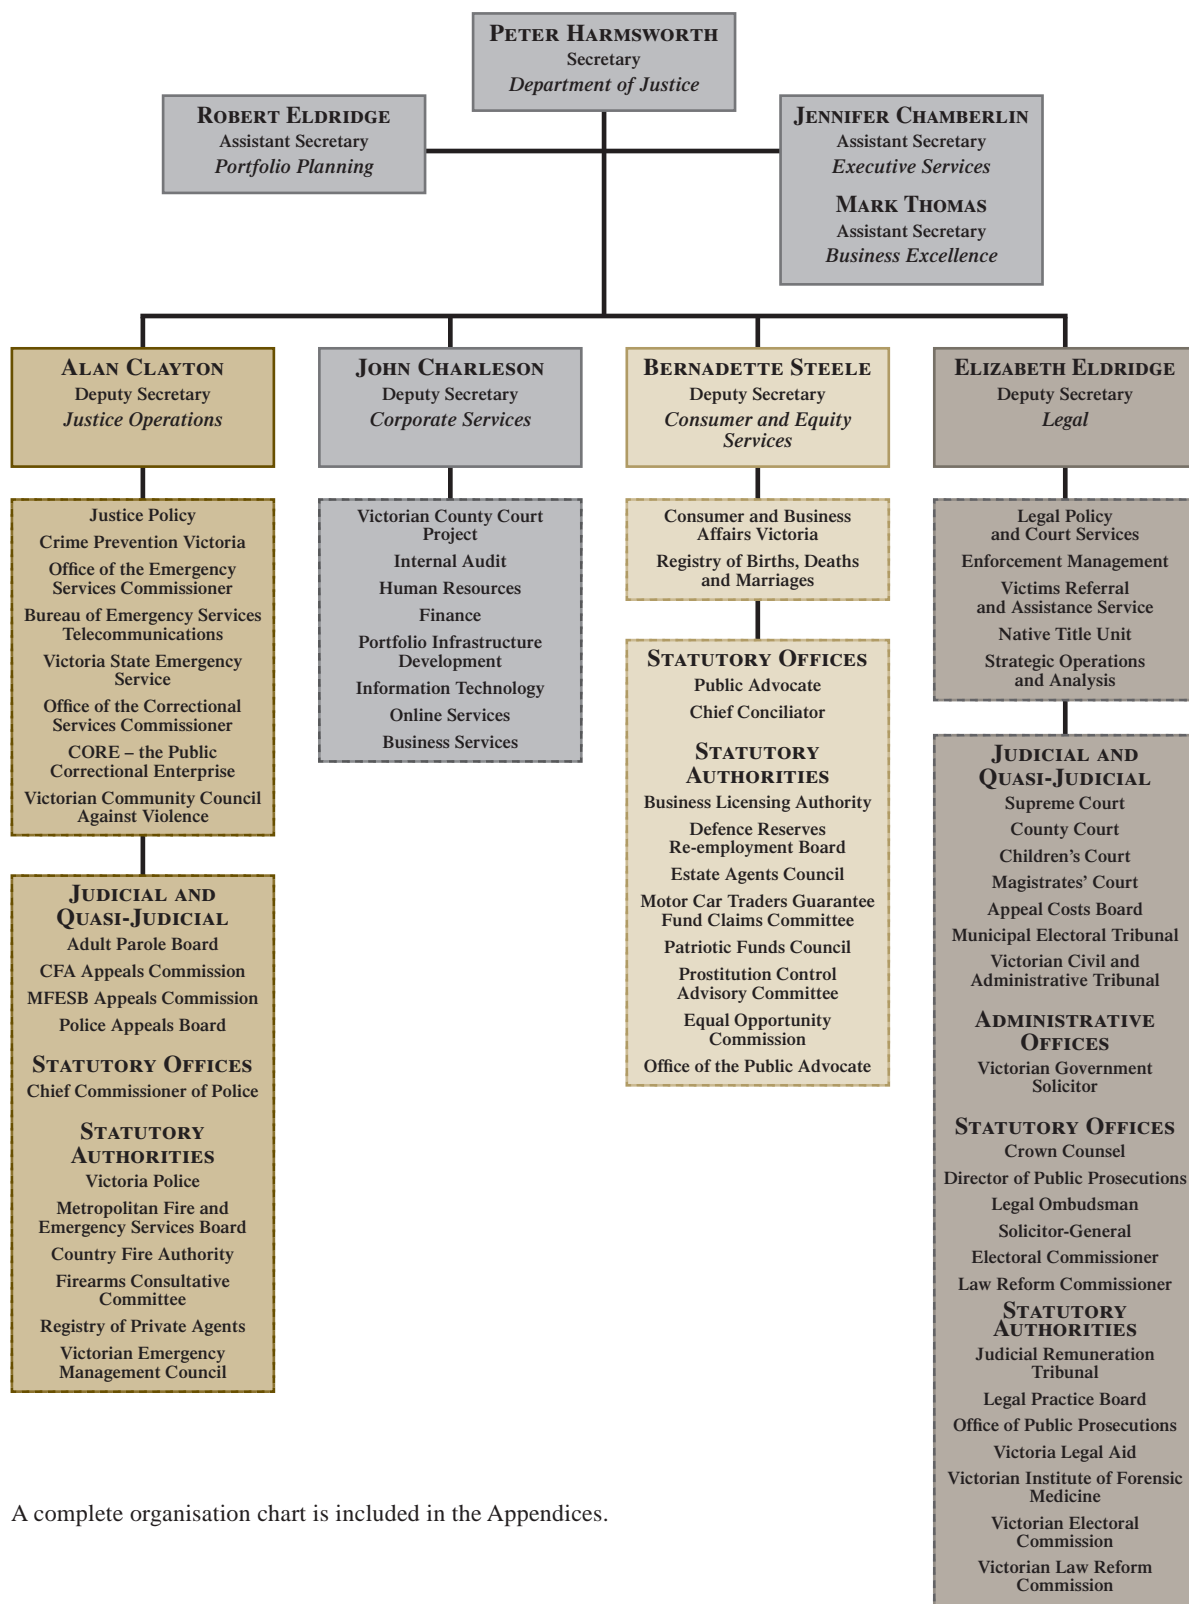

Ms Eldridge supports the Attorney-General and the Secretary to facilitate achievement of the Attorney-General's legal policy and law reform initiatives. This area of Justice has direct responsibility also, for the Victims Referral and Assistance Service, the Native Title Unit and the Civil Justice Review Project. The position of Deputy Secretary, Legal has an auspicing role for a number of boards, statutory bodies and administrative offices including the Office of Public Prosecutions, the Legal Ombudsman, the Legal Practice Board, Victoria Legal Aid, the Victorian Institute of Forensic Medicine, the Victorian Law Reform Commission and the Privacy Commission.

Mr Robert Eldridge, Assistant Secretary, Portfolio Planning

The role of Mr Eldridge is to provide leadership in strategic planning and research, to co-ordinate the portfolio's Expenditure Review Committee processes and to implement the Aboriginal Justice Agreement. The Assistant Secretary, Portfolio Planning, ensures that Ministers and executive management are able to monitor the operation and performance of the overall justice system.
